MARK SCHEME

General Marking Instructions

Introduction

Mark schemes are intended to ensure that the GCSE examinations are marked consistently and fairly. The mark schemes provide markers with an indication of the nature and range of candidates' responses likely to be worthy of credit. They also set out the criteria which they should apply in allocating marks to candidates' responses.

Assessment objectives

Below are the assessment objectives for English Literature.

Candidates must:

- AO1 Respond to texts critically and imaginatively; select and evaluate relevant textual detail to illustrate and support interpretations;
- AO2 Explain how language, structure and form contribute to writers' presentation of ideas, themes, characters and settings;
- AO3 Make comparisons and explain links between texts, evaluating writers' differing ways of expressing meaning and achieving effects; and
- AO4 Relate texts to their social, cultural and historical contexts; explain how texts have been influential and significant to self and other readers in different contexts and at different times.

Quality of candidates' responses

In marking the examination papers, examiners should be looking for a quality of response reflecting the level of maturity which may reasonably be expected of a 16-year-old which is the age at which the majority of candidates sit their GCSE examinations.

Flexibility in marking

Mark schemes are not intended to be totally prescriptive. No mark scheme can cover all the responses which candidates may produce. In the event of unanticipated answers, examiners are expected to use their professional judgement to assess the validity of answers. If an answer is particularly problematic, then examiners should seek the guidance of the Supervising Examiner.

Positive marking

Examiners are encouraged to be positive in their marking, giving appropriate credit for what candidates know, understand and can do rather than penalising candidates for errors or omissions. Examiners should make use of the whole of the available mark range for any particular question and be prepared to award full marks for a response which is as good as might reasonably be expected of a 16-year-old GCSE candidate.

Awarding zero marks

Marks should only be awarded for valid responses and no marks should be awarded for an answer which is completely incorrect or inappropriate.

Types of mark schemes

Mark schemes for tasks or questions which require candidates to respond in extended written form are marked on the basis of levels of response, awarded in bands, which take account of the quality of written communication.

Response Bands

Tasks and questions requiring candidates to respond in extended writing are marked in terms of levels of response, awarded in bands. In deciding which band to award, examiners should look for the 'best fit' bearing in mind that weakness in one area may be compensated for by strength in another. In deciding which mark within a particular band to award to any response, examiners are expected to use their professional judgement.

Threshold performance: Response which just merits inclusion in the band and should be awarded a mark at or near the bottom of the range.

Intermediate performance: Response which clearly merits inclusion in the band and should be awarded a mark at or near the middle of the range.

High performance: Response which fully satisfies the band description and should be awarded a mark at or near the top of the range.

Quality of written communication

Quality of written communication is taken into account in assessing candidates' responses to all tasks and questions that require them to respond in extended written form. These tasks and questions are marked on the basis of levels of response. The description for each band of response includes reference to the quality of written communication.

For conciseness, quality of written communication is distinguished within bands as follows:

- Band 1: Quality of written communication is basic
- Band 2: Quality of written communication is emerging
- Band 3: Quality of written communication is competent
- Band 4: Quality of written communication is good
- Band 5: Quality of written communication is excellent

In interpreting these band descriptions, examiners should refer to the more detailed guidance provided below:

Band 1 (Basic): The candidate makes only a very limited selection and use of an appropriate form and style of writing. The organisation of material will lack clarity and coherence. Presentation, spelling, punctuation and grammar will be such that intended meaning is not clear.

Band 2 (Emerging): The candidate begins to select and use an appropriate form and style of writing. The organisation of material may lack clarity and coherence. Presentation, spelling, punctuation and grammar may be such that intended meaning is not clear.

Band 3 (Competent): The candidate makes a competent selection and use of an appropriate form and style of writing. Relevant material is organised with some degree of clarity and coherence. Presentation, spelling, punctuation and grammar are sufficiently competent to make meaning clear.

Band 4 (Good): The candidate makes a good selection and use of an appropriate form and style of writing. Relevant material is organised with clarity and coherence. Presentation, spelling, punctuation and grammar are sufficiently good to make meaning clear.

Band 5 (Excellent): The candidate successfully selects and uses the most appropriate form and style of writing. Relevant material is organised with a high degree of clarity and coherence. Presentation, spelling, punctuation and grammar are of a sufficiently high standard to make meaning clear.

COVID-19 Context

Given the unprecedented circumstances presented by the COVID-19 public health crisis, senior examiners, under the instruction of CCEA awarding organisation, are required to train assistant examiners to apply the mark scheme in case of disrupted learning and lost teaching time. The interpretation and intended application of the mark scheme for this examination series will be communicated through the standardising meeting by the Chief or Principal Examiner and will be monitored through the supervision period. This paragraph will apply to examination series in 2021-2022 only.

Section A – Drama

Guidelines to assessing AO2 in candidates' responses to Unit 2: Section A

Assessment Objective 2 requires candidates to “explain how language, structure and form contribute to writers' presentation of ideas, themes, characters and settings.”

Use of Language and Stylistic Devices/Dramatic Techniques

When assessing candidates' responses to drama, some of the following uses of language and stylistic and dramatic devices may be noted. (This list is neither prescriptive nor exhaustive, but is intended as a helpful guide):

- division into acts and scenes
- stage directions
- use of some technical terms e.g. exposition, protagonist, hero, minor character
- denouement
- cohesive elements, e.g. repetition of words or ideas, climax, sequential ordering
- disjunctive elements e.g. use of curtain, flashback, or anticipation of events
- asides, soliloquy, dramatic monologue, use of narrator, chorus
- tonal features, e.g. emphasis, exclamation
- interaction through dialogue and movement
- use of punctuation to indicate delivery of lines, e.g. interruption, hesitation, turn-taking, listening
- reportage
- vocabulary choices
- staging, set, lighting, use of properties
- costume and music effects

1 O'Casey: Juno and the Paycock

- (a) With reference to the ways O'Casey presents the behaviour of Jerry and Bentham, show how far you agree that they are disrespectful towards Mary.

The following textual details may be used as supporting material.

Jerry Devine's and Bentham's disrespectful attitudes and behaviour:

- Jerry's initial dialogue with Mary is resentful: "The bitter word agen, Mary";
- Mary finds Jerry's attitude disrespectful and criticises him for it: "You won't allow me to be friendly with you";
- Mary finds Jerry's reference to their relationship disrespectful: "If you go on talkin' like this, Jerry Devine, you'll make me hate you!";
- Jerry focuses on himself rather than Mary: "Don't be so hard on a fella, Mary...";
- Bentham's departure is swift and definite leaving Mary emotionally bereft: "Not even a line, mother";
- Bentham had little respect for her feelings when he abandoned her: "Because I love him with all my heart and soul, mother" and "Charlie had it all";
- Bentham's lack of respect is highlighted by Juno: 'Mary'll have maybe forty years to face an' handle, an' every wan of them'll be tainted with a bitter memory';
- Jerry's attitude to Mary is judgemental: "My God, Mary, have you fallen as low as that?" Even he can acknowledge the disrespect inherent in it: "I didn't mean it that way, Mary".

O'Casey's use of language and dramatic techniques:

- the stage direction and Mary's dialogue communicate Jerry's aggressive actions which are disrespectful of Mary's autonomy: catching her arm and "You're hurtin' me arm!";
- sarcastic use of the colloquial term, 'me lady' is disrespectful and he remains focused on his jealous feelings: "you've clicked with someone else, me lady!";
- use of the stage direction communicates Jerry as disrespectful of Mary and her decision to leave: She is going out, when Jerry bars the way;
- use of repetition communicates Jerry's attitude and actions are contrary to Mary's desires: "Let me go, let me go!";
- use of the stage direction: A look of dejection, mingled with uncertain anxiety, makes clear how deeply affected Mary is by Bentham's rejection. The emotional pain he caused her is made visible and audible through the stage direction, tonelessly;
- Juno's hesitant dialogue suggests she knows Bentham's behaviour has wounded Mary deeply;
- use of pause and fractured syntax emphasise how Mary believes Bentham did not respect her enough to see beyond her social status: "I imagine....he thought....we weren't...good enough for him";
- use of the derogatory noun, "scoundrel" makes clear how Boyle views Bentham's behaviour towards Mary to be unacceptable and disrespectful;
- empathic tone emphasises Juno's belief that Bentham abused Mary's trust and her deep affection: "Now I know why Bentham left poor Mary in th' lurch; I can see it all now";
- Mary compares Jerry's lack of understanding with that of others: "it's only as I expected – your humanity is just as narrow as the humanity of others";
- both men contrast in their background but treat Mary in a similarly disrespectful manner.

However, some candidates may argue that:

- Jerry shows his respect for Mary by offering domestic comfort through marriage: "You an' I could live nice an' cosily on that";
- Jerry's closing remarks suggest he respects Mary enough to still want to help her: "if I can do anything for you.....Mary.....I will";
- Jerry seems to want to increase Mary's sense of self-respect by rescuing her from poverty: "it would lift you out o' this place an'...";
- Jerry believes he respects Mary by offering a chivalric gesture: 'Let me kiss your hand, your little, tiny, white hand!';

- Bentham shows respect for Mary by checking on the votive light when he senses that she is afraid to do so: “It’s all right; Mary, I’ll go.”

Some candidates may argue that Jerry’s actions reflect those of the time.

Use the Assessment Matrix

- (b) Look again at the extract from Act 3 beginning on page 133 with Boyle's words: "More trouble in our native land, is it?" and ending on page 136 with the words, "the Will's a wash-out!"

With reference to the ways O'Casey presents Boyle in the extract and elsewhere in the play, show how far you agree that he fails in his duties.

The following textual details may be used as supporting material.

In the extract he fails in his duties:

- he lies to Mrs Boyle throughout the play about his whereabouts, his intentions and, in the extract, by hiding the truth about the inheritance: "Money – what money?";
- he reacts in a self-centred way to the news of Mary's pregnancy: "Oh, isn't this a nice thing to come on top o' me, an' the state I'm in!";
- Boyle fails as a father as he ignores Mrs Boyle's comments about how difficult Mary's life will be and speaks only of how he will punish her: "Where is she till I tell her off?";
- Mrs Boyle highlights his inadequacies as a father: "...your fatherly care never troubled the poor girl";
- he threatens the pregnant Mary: "I'm tellin' you when I'm done with her she'll be a sorry girl!";
- he fails to accept any responsibility for what has happened to Mary and chooses to blame her aspirations to improve herself: "Her readin's afther bringin' her to a nice pass...";
- he lacks parental care through his insistence that Mary will leave;
- he is self-absorbed: "I lived before I seen yous, an' I can live when yous are gone";
- he fails as both husband and father when he reveals he hasn't told the family the truth about the inheritance: "There's no money comin' from oul' Ellison...".

O'Casey's use of language and dramatic techniques in the extract:

- the stage direction of Boyle's reaction to news of Mary lacks paternal concern: "A gradle wrong with her!" Peevishly;
- the rhetorical question and use of sarcasm show that Boyle does not recognise his wife's obvious concern: "How ud I know – I wasn't there, was I?";
- Boyle's exclamatory tone is thoughtless: "married at wanst!";
- the stage direction suggests Boyle feigns a sense of honour: passionately, "Then he'll marry her, he'll have to marry her!";
- his self-absorbed reaction is articulated through repeated personal pronouns: "the state I'm in!"; "A pretty show I'll be..." and "Amn't I afther goin' through enough...";
- Boyle fails as a father as his questions concerning Mary are all focused on his ability to enact his punishment: "Where is she? Where is she till I tell her off?";
- the repetition of "madnin" is an articulation of Boyle's anger and self-centred approach to the situation;
- Juno's sarcasm is an indictment of Boyle's inadequacy as a parent: "an' your fatherly care never troubled the poor girl";
- the repetition of Juno's words shows Boyle makes no attempt to compromise or ameliorate the tense situation: "Ay, she'll leave this place, an' quick too!";
- use of simile and the common noun 'woman' to refer to his wife: "You're talkin' like a two-year-oul', woman";
- use of an exclamatory tone when Boyle discloses his secret, making no attempt to lessen its impact on his already shocked wife: "– the Will's a wash-out!".

Elsewhere in the play:

- Boyle does not work and is unable to support his family financially while Juno shoulders the burden;
- he fails as a provider as he feigns ill health: Suddenly catching his thigh;
- he spends his time drinking with the disreputable Joxer Daly;
- he criticises his wife to Joxer: "she's always grousin";
- he falsely reassures Juno that he will end his friendship with Joxer: "Juno, I'm done with Joxer";

- he fails as a father as he offers Mary no guidance on her male suitors and he refers to the books she reads as “thrash”;
- he shows no concern when Johnny is suffering from extreme paranoia and anxiety: “E-e-e-e-eh; it’s all nonsense”;
- he ultimately abandons Johnny in his hour of need;
- he allows the family to veer towards financial ruin on the promise of his inheritance: “An’ you let us run into debt...”;
- Boyle’s drunken singing during the play’s resolution communicates his self-imposed state of oblivion he adopts towards his family’s needs.

However, some candidates may argue:

- in the extract, Boyle shows initial concern for Mary: “there’s is nothin’ wrong with her, is there?”;
- Boyle makes an attempt to protect Mary from Jerry’s aggressive advances: “This is nice goins on in front of her father!”;
- he recalls key dates in his family’s history as he tells Bentham how his wife got her name: “I met her in June; we were married in June, an’ Johnny was born in June”;
- he initially breaks contact with Joxer: “Get ou’ o’ this before I take the law into me own hands!”;
- he makes protestations of loyalty to Juno at the end of Act One: “Juno, I’m done with Joxer”;
- Captain Boyle desires to share his good fortune with his family;
- there are occasional examples of his care for his family: glass of whiskey for Johnny, calls order when Juno is about to sing;
- he vows to make Bentham honour his responsibilities to Mary: “I’ll folly him, an’ bring him back, an’ make him do her justice.”

2 Priestley: An Inspector Calls

- (a) With reference to the ways Priestley presents Mr Birling, show how far you agree that he is uncaring towards others.

The following textual details may be used as supporting material.

Evidence that Mr Birling is uncaring:

- Mr Birling dominates his daughter's engagement party with talk of business and profitable partnership which is uncaring: "Your father and I have been friendly rivals in business for some time now";
- he reacts uncaringly to Eric's uneasy manner: sharply, staring at him;
- he dismisses Eva's death as merely a "Horrid business";
- use of the adjective "wretched" to describe Eva is dismissive and uncaring;
- he is uncaring towards his workforce by continually dismissing the possibility of increasing the wages of his workers;
- he criticises Eric harshly to silence his opinions: rather angrily, "Unless you brighten your ideas, you'll never be in a position to let anybody stay";
- he is uncaring towards Sheila as he attempts to justify Gerald's infidelity: "Now, Sheila, I'm not defending him. But you must understand that a lot of young men";
- his reactions to Sheila's and Eric's anguish are uncaring as he focuses on the potential damage to the family name: "Now listen, you two...all we have to do is to keep our heads";
- he reacts in a threatening manner, denying Eric's concerns: threatening ERIC, "And I say - either stop shouting or get out";
- he demands that Eric pay back the money, showing an uncaring attitude towards Eric: "you'll work for nothing";
- he is uncaring when he fails to recognise his children's autonomy and opinions: "Any more of that and you leave this room";
- Eric's comment says it all: "You're not the kind of father a chap could go to when he's in trouble."

Priestley's use of language and dramatic techniques:

- use of imperative tone to command Sheila into silence, "Be quiet, Sheila!";
- Mr Birling shows a lack of parental care by referring to his son in derogatory terms, "You damned fool";
- use of stage direction shows Mr Birling refuses to listen to Eric's honest appraisal of his parenting: angrily, "Don't talk to me like that";
- use of threatening tone as Mr Birling reminds Eric of his part in events: "If anybody's up to the neck in this business, you are";
- repeated interruptions shows how little he cares for Eric: "Just let me finish, Eric";
- use of stage directions to show Mr Birling's uncaring attitude towards Eric and Sheila: angrily, shouting, threatening;
- use of mocking tone: "the famous younger generation...And they can't even take a joke".

However, some candidates may argue:

- Mr Birling offers a toast to his daughter's happiness: raising his glass, "So here's wishing the pair of you – the very best that life can bring";
- he admonishes the Inspector for upsetting Sheila and he follows her out: "Why the devil do you want to go upsetting the child like that?";
- he attempts to shield Sheila from salacious information: "And what I was going to say was that I protest against the way in which my daughter, a young unmarried girl, is being dragged into this";
- he reacts immediately to protect his wife's integrity against the Inspector's scepticism: angrily, to INSPECTOR, "Look here, I'm not going to have this, Inspector. You'll apologize at once";
- he attempts to protect his wife's sensibilities by insisting she is spared the details of Eric's confession; his change of tone is indicated by the stage direction: Gentler. "Go on, Sybil";
- he tries to reassure Sheila: "Come on, Sheila, don't look like that. All over now".

Credit any other valid suggestions.

Use of Language and Stylistic Devices/Dramatic Techniques, in response to the Key Term "presents", see Guidelines at the start of the section.

Use the Assessment Matrix

- (b) Look again at the extract from Act 3 beginning on page 52 with Eric's words, "Yes. And that's when it happened." and ending at the bottom of page 54 with Mrs Birling's word, "Sheila!"

With reference to the ways Priestley presents members of the Birling family in the extract and elsewhere in the play, show how far you agree that the Birling family is honest.

The following textual details may be used as supporting details.

Attitudes to honesty in the extract:

- Mrs Birling's reaction to Eric's honest confession is negative and critical: With a cry "Oh – Eric – how could you?";
- Eric's quick and definite replies indicate he wants to be honest with the Inspector: "Yes. And that's when it happened";
- Eric is honest about his feelings: "I was in a hell of a state about it";
- Mr Birling wants Eric to be honest: "Where did you get fifty pounds from?";
- Birling tries to silence honesty: angrily, "I don't want any of that talk from you";
- Eric is dishonest as he commits a crime in order to provide for Eva;
- Mrs Birling is shocked at Eric's dishonesty: "You stole money?";
- Eric's persistent attempts to deny that his actions constituted theft suggest he does not want to be completely honest about his criminality: "No, not really. I intended to pay it back";
- Birling's immediate reaction is to be dishonest by covering up Eric's embezzlement;
- Eric is honest about his relationship with his father: "Because you're not the kind of father a chap could go to when he is in trouble".

Priestley's use of language and dramatic techniques in the extract:

- the broken syntax and the hesitant tone communicate Eric's desire for honesty even though he finds it difficult to talk about: "– so I insisted on giving her enough money to keep her going" and "I suppose – about fifty pounds all told";
- Eric's disparaging language and critical tone make clear he values honesty and he is angry at the dishonesty of others: "the ones I see some of your responsible friends with";
- Eric's silence, expressed through the stage directions, suggests he finds it hard to be completely honest about the theft in front of his mother: As Eric does not reply;
- the re-entry of Mrs Birling indicates she values honesty enough to wish to hear what Eric has to say: "I'm sorry, Arthur, but I simply couldn't stay in there. I had to know what's happening";
- Sheila's use of simple, declarative sentence as she tells the truth: "She [Eva] told mother";
- the stage direction and use of an exclamatory tone make clear how fearful Mrs Birling is of Sheila's honesty: alarmed, "Sheila!".

Attitudes to honesty elsewhere in the play:

- Birling is honest about his feelings concerning the engagement: "I'm going to tell you frankly, without any pretences, that your engagement to Sheila means a tremendous lot to me";
- Sheila, despite initially running away from the Inspector, chooses to return and to speak honestly of her involvement: coming in, closing the door, "You knew it was me all the time, didn't you?";
- Sheila speaks frankly about Eric's drinking: "This isn't the time to pretend that Eric isn't used to drink.";
- Sheila values Gerald's honesty: "That's probably about the best thing you've said tonight. At least it's honest";
- Sheila believes honesty is more important than reputation: "It means that we've no excuse now for putting on airs and that if we've any sense we won't try"; Sheila urges honesty – "Don't let's start dodging and pretending now";
- Mrs Birling's answers are evasive as she tries to avoid being honest: "I dare say there was" and "And if I was...";

- Mrs Birling is unrepentantly honest about her prejudice: “- and naturally that was one of the things that prejudiced me against her case.”;
- Birling regrets being honest with the Inspector: “What chance had I after that? I was a fool not to have insisted upon seeing him alone”;
- Mrs Birling tries to prevent Sheila being honest with Gerald: warningly, “Sheila!”;
- Eric honestly declares his guilt and understands that reputation and money are not his priorities: “I stole some money....The money’s not the important thing.”

3 Friel: Philadelphia, Here I Come!

- (a) With reference to the ways Friel presents Madge, show how far you would agree that Madge is strong-minded.

The following textual details may be used as supporting material.

Evidence that Madge is strong-minded:

- Madge acts as a mentor to Gar: “He’ll have something to say then, you’ll see”;
- she is strong-minded enough to have an easy relationship with Gar noted in the sarcastic tone: “He’s losing a treasure, indeed!”;
- her mental strength allows her to be more emotionally open compared to Gar’s father;
- she is obviously used to Gar being tactile as he holds on to her and forces her to do a few steps, but she is able to issue orders: “Stop it! Stop it! You brat you!”
- she allows Gar to share his feelings to her about his father but is not afraid to use sarcasm to express her opinion: “That flattened him”;
- Madge has the strength of mind to argue against Gar’s perception of SB: “just because he doesn’t say much doesn’t mean he hasn’t feelings like the rest of us”;
- it is she who has the authority to reveal some details to Gar about his mother: “I’ve told you before: she went with a dozen – that was the kind of her”, but no more than she wishes: “For you’re not going to pump me”;
- Gar is dependent on Madge’s stories about his mother and this reliance on her strength of character and truthfulness is shown in the repetition of “Madge says”;
- despite her physical frailty, Madge’s strength of mind means she takes on the extra work of looking after her own family: “I was over at Nelly’s. The place was upside down”;
- she is never contradicted or made fun of by Gar Private (in contrast to his treatment of SB) displaying his perception of Madge’s strength of mind;
- her mental strength is displayed by her short, curt orders, “Gar! Your tea!”
- she feels strong-minded enough to exert authority over Gar: “You know where it’s kept, don’t you?”;
- she is not afraid to clearly express her feelings to the Canon, who, in turn, is impressed with Madge’s witty and seemingly disrespectful comments: “She’s a sharp one, Madge”;
- she is not afraid to speak her mind to Gar and SB with cutting irony: “A body wouldn’t get a word in edgeways with you two”;
- Gar admires Madge for her strength of mind and frankness: “give me a piece of your courage”;
- Madge has the strength of mind in many instances to take the initiative on matters such as secretly organising the boys to visit Gar on his last night in Ireland;
- she is elated that her new grandniece is to be named after her but is strong-minded enough to hide her disappointment from SB and Gar when this doesn’t happen and just comments: “They’re going to call it Brigid”;
- even in her soliloquies she is strong-minded enough to resist her own disappointment about the christening;
- SB feels able to unload to Madge some of his distress about his son’s departure, but she is strong-minded enough to contradict her employer: “He never had a sailor suit”.

However, some candidates may argue:

- despite working for the Donnell family since Gar was born, she is under-appreciated by SB who sees her as a housekeeper;
- she loses control when her frustration and exhaustion build up showing she is on the point of tears;
- dashes, ellipsis and exclamation mark show her mental anguish at Gar’s leaving: “and your room has to be done out – and – and – I’m telling you..... I won’t have time to lift my head!”;
- she often camouflages her true feelings by her gruffness: “Ah! Will you leave me alone”;
- she appears to mentally break down with SB’s crassness and reaches the point of tears: “if you had any decency in you at all you would keep them plates in while there’s a lady in your presence”;

- she returns from the Mulhern's and is so obviously physically and mentally weary and upset that even SB remarks: "There's nothing wrong is there?";
- use of dashes and ellipsis when Madge recites the baby's name to emphasise her distress and inability to be strong-minded as she tries to convince herself that her name is "too aul'-fashioned or something";
- her sense of loss and mental vulnerability is portrayed in her final monologue when she slips the envelope into the coat pocket into Gar's pocket and stands looking at the bedroom door;
- some candidates may argue that she is weak-minded by avoiding revealing to Gar that the baby has not been named after her: "I'm just tired, son. Very tired".

- (b) Look again at the extract from Episode II, near the top of page 71 with the words, “The boys... They weren’t always like this” and ending on page 73 with the words, “And that was that night”. (for those using the version which was reset in 2000, the extract begins in the middle of page 58 and ends towards the top of page 61.)

With reference to the ways Friel presents Gar and the boys in the extract and elsewhere in the play, show how far you agree that Gar and the boys cannot accept reality.

The following textual details may be used as supporting material.

Gar and the boys in the extract:

- Private questions whether the exaggerated boasting by the boys was enjoyable in the past: “They weren’t always like this, were they?”;
- females are referred to disrespectfully to exaggerate the boys’ sexual prowess: “two wee Greenock pieces”;
- Tom tries to initiate another fake memory and exaggerates: “By God it was a holy fright last year, night after night”;
- Tom pushes Ned to continue with the escapism of the exaggerated fantasies: “Remember”, “Mind the night”;
- the stories become increasingly sensationalised: “the one that hauled you down into the ditch”;
- Public is dismissed quickly in favour of another far-fetched story;
- Joe is ignored as he tries to ground supposed memories in truth: “Was I there, Ned?”;
- the stories become more detailed with Tom changing the subject from the reality of Gar’s imminent departure and then supporting Ned’s story with exaggerated, lewd details: “In the bloody pelt”, “Not a stab on him!”;
- the truth of the minor incident is revealed by Private: “And that was that night”;
- Ned’s and the boys’ actual cowardice is revealed by Private with sarcasm: “defied not only the brave Ned but the whole lot of us”;
- Private’s concluding monologue sets the reality and the exaggeration in perspective in the extract.

Friel’s use of language and dramatic techniques:

- ellipses and question marks expressing Private’s uncertainty about the reality of the boys’ behaviour: “The boys....They weren’t always like this, were they?”;
- the stage direction briskly as Tom tries to revive the dream-world the boys have;
- the stage direction sulkily and Ned’s description of females, “Bloody cows”, opens Ned to the reality of the continued exaggeration and what really happened;
- the stage direction thawing as Ned succumbs to exaggerated fantasies again;
- Tom and Ned build on each other’s exaggerated fantasies with vulgar language references to females: “hot things”, “tramps”;
- coarse language to emphasise imaginary success in relationships: “if there’s a fast woman in the country, she’ll go for Ned first thing. Lucky bugger!”;
- repeated use of pause suggesting an awareness of the exaggeration of the inflated story;
- use of Private’s monologue to reveal the truth;
- use of the divided self means there is no reaction by the boys who continue to avoid reality, creating dramatic irony.

Elsewhere in the play:

- Gar exaggerates his prowess in music and sport: “the free is being taken by dashing Gar O’Donnell...pride of the Ballybeg team”;
- Gar is flattered that the boys have come to see him but accepts reality when it’s revealed that Madge arranged it;
- Ned addresses the reality of Gar’s departure presenting him with the belt: “You’ll make out all right over there”;
- Joe accepts the reality and agrees the boys exaggerate: “they’ll hang about the gable of the hotel and chat and do nothing”;

- Gar accepts the unexaggerated reality of missing SB and Madge as he does in failing to recognise the failure of his relationship with Kate: “for this is a film you’ll run over and over again”;
- use of dashes to show Gar confronting the reality that his future life as an emigrant may not be better than his present life: “I don’t know. I – I – I don’t know”.

4 Russell: Blood Brothers

- (a) With reference to the ways Russell presents Mickey and Edward, show how far you agree that the failure of their friendship is due to class differences.

The following textual details may be used as supporting material.

Evidence that class differences are responsible for the failure of the friendship of Mickey and Edward:

- as children, Edward is used to having sweets and toys whereas Mickey has little;
- their houses show the difference in class: “He lives up by the park”/“He’s a friggin’ poshy”;
- Mrs Lyons emphasises to Edward the difference in class between him and Mickey: “I don’t want you mixing with boys like that!”;
- Edward and Mickey grow up in different surroundings: “He was clean, neat and tidy”/ “He was untidy”;
- Edward and Mickey have different educational opportunities – Edward attends a private boarding school, Mickey goes to the local school: “Knew every word in the dictionary”/ “could swear like a soldier”;
- Mickey leaves school and enters the workforce but is soon unemployed, whereas Edward goes off to university and meets lots of new people: “I haven’t been to so many parties in my life”;
- Edward completely misunderstands Mickey’s feelings about being unemployed: “why is a job so important?”;
- Mickey resents Edward’s affluence and tells him he should stick with those of his own class;
- Mickey blames his upbringing for the futility of his position whereas Edward becomes a respected member of the community as a Councillor;
- Mickey resorts to crime due to his desperate personal situation brought about by his lack of opportunity;
- Mickey is envious of Edward and all of his advantages, at the end of the play – he comments: “how come you got everything...an’ I got nothin’?”;
- as children, while apparent, their class differences do not impact on their friendship. However as they mature, the friendship comes under increasing strain.

However, some candidates may argue:

- Mickey cruelly rejects Edward’s friendship and offer of money out of his own pride rather than because of class differences;
- Mickey’s rejection of blood brotherhood shows he no longer considers their friendship valid: “That was kids’ stuff, Eddie”;
- Edward’s relationship with Linda and his betrayal leads to the final disintegration of his friendship with Mickey and Mickey’s loss of control and seeking of revenge: “There’s a man gone mad in town tonight”;
- fate and superstition, as voiced by the Narrator, cause their friendship to fail: “And do we blame superstition for what came to pass?”;
- their mothers, especially Mrs Lyons, try to block their friendship because of their own feelings of guilt, but are only partially successful.

Russell’s use of language and dramatic techniques

- the aspirations of both families are reflected in the use of contrast in the songs: “Silver trays to take meals on... a bike with both wheels on”;
- contrasting descriptions of the boys – Edward is bright and forthcoming whilst Mickey is bored and petulant;
- contrast in linguistic choices: “I’m pissed off.”/“You say smashing things don’t you?”;
- music and stage directions indicate a softer treatment when the policeman visits the Lyons’ house: towards the Lyons’ house music is heard/The Policeman has removed his helmet and holds a glass of Scotch;

- Mickey uses blunt language to emphasise his failing friendship with Edward: “You’re a dick head!”;
- use of stage directions to indicate Edward’s growing uncertainty in their friendship: slightly unsure but laughs anyway;
- the tragic structure of the play presents the inevitability of the failure of the friendship between Mickey and Edward;
- question at end: “And do we blame superstition for what came to pass?”.

- (b) Look again at the extract beginning in the middle of page 7 with Mrs Lyons' words: "Twins? You're expecting twins?" and ending on Page 9 with the stage direction: Mrs Lyons gives her a half-smile and a shrug, perhaps slightly embarrassed at what she has revealed.

(For those using the "red-backed edition", the extract begins in the middle of page 11 and ends on page 13)

With reference to the ways Russell presents Mrs Lyons in the extract and elsewhere in the play, show how far you agree that Mrs Lyons is dislikeable.

The following textual details may be used as supporting material.

What Mrs Lyons says and does in the extract:

- Mrs Lyons in her excitement forces Mrs Johnstone to agree to her plan very quickly without time for thought: "Quickly, quickly, tell me...when are you due?";
- she is willing to deceive her husband: "He need never guess";
- she is selfish throughout this exchange, thinking only of her own interests: "But when he arrives home I tell him we were wrong...I have a baby, our baby";
- she manipulates Mrs Johnstone and plays upon her fears: "You said yourself, you said you had too many children already";
- she plays upon Mrs Johnstone's kind nature: "it will work, it will if only you'll...";
- she frightens Mrs Johnstone into action: "Already you're being threatened by the Welfare people";
- she does not consider Mrs Johnstone's feelings and interrupts her: "Oh, it's mad..." "I know it is. It's mad...but it's wonderful";
- she places emotional pressure on Mrs Johnstone: "Please, Mrs Johnstone. Please";
- she lists the benefits of such an arrangement: "Look, at least if the child was with me you'd be able to see him every day, as you came to work";
- she may receive some sympathy from the audience as she is so desperate to have a child: "I reach out. But as I do. He fades away."

Russell's use of language and dramatic techniques in the extract:

- use of the repeated question to build tension: "Twins? You're expecting twins?";
- use of the Narrator to indicate how quickly Mrs Lyons' selfish plan was conceived: "How quickly an idea, planted, can/Take root and grow into a plan";
- stage directions to show that Mrs Lyons is agitated about the prospect of having a child, (containing her excitement);
- use of commands as Mrs Lyons attempts to impose control: "Give one of them to me";
- use of emotional pressure by Mrs Lyons indicated in the stage direction: stares at Mrs Johnstone, willing her to agree;
- use of the song to present Mrs Lyons's thoughts and hopes: "I've dreamed of all the places I would take him";
- dramatic impact of Mrs Lyons' impulsive action: She grabs a cushion and arranges it beneath her dress.

Elsewhere in the play:

- Mrs Lyons mocks Mrs Johnstone: laughing "Oh... you mean you're superstitious";
- Mrs Lyons makes Mrs Johnstone swear on the Bible to seal their arrangement: "we must make this a...binding agreement";
- Mrs Lyons sacks Mrs Johnstone despite promising that she could see the baby and lies to her husband about this: "she ignores most of her work";
- Mrs Lyons uses Mrs Johnstone's superstitious nature to manipulate her into leaving without the baby: "You do know what they say about twins, secretly parted, don't you?";
- Mrs Lyons frightens Mrs Johnstone into staying quiet: "you will kill them";
- Mrs Lyons tries to keep Edward away from Mickey, claiming she is doing this out of love: "It's only because I love you";
- Mrs Lyons is condescending towards Mickey and blames him for Edward's behaviour: "where boys like that live";

- Mrs Lyons' love for Edward becomes obsessive and overbearing as she is terrified of losing him: "Where did you get that...Why do you wear it?";
- Mrs Lyons unfairly attacks Mrs Johnstone and blames her for what has happened: "I curse the day I met you. You ruined me";
- use of off-stage chant suggests her demonisation: "the mad woman lives";
- Mrs Lyons spitefully makes Mickey aware of Edward and Linda without any thought of the consequences: She turns Mickey round and points out Edward and Linda.

However, some candidates may argue:

- Mrs Lyons' desperation to have a child drives her actions and she deserves some sympathy, especially as her husband refuses to adopt: "We've been trying for such a long time now";
- Mrs Lyons is initially kind and considerate towards Mrs Johnstone: "Hello, Mrs Johnstone...Is the job working out all right for you?";
- Mrs Lyons is lonely as her husband is frequently absent and she is living alone in a large house: "I'm finding it rather large at the present";
- Mr Lyons is harshly dismissive of her worries: "For Christ's sake, you bring me home from work in the middle of the day";
- Mrs Lyons shows clear affection towards Edward and tries to be a loving mother towards him: "Look after yourself, my love";
- Mrs Lyons' growing paranoia is shown with her attack on Mrs Johnstone with the kitchen knife which is an indication of her worsening mental condition: "I curse you. Witch!".

5 Sherriff: Journey's End

- (a) With reference to the ways Sherriff presents Trotter, show how far you agree that Trotter is someone to admire.

The following textual details may be used as supporting material.

Evidence that Trotter is someone to admire:

- Trotter is friendly, tolerant and loyal to Stanhope;
- he is concerned about Stanhope's drinking and health;
- he has been promoted through the ranks, unlike the other officers;
- his language is more colloquial, not having had a public-school education: "I don't fancy crawling about on my belly after that cutlet";
- he is kind to Raleigh and asks about his well being when he arrives: "you'll soon get used to it";
- he is dedicated to his wife;
- he uses humour to overcome difficult situations: "Well it won't let me cut it";
- he tries to dispel the unease of others: "cheer up skipper. You do look glum!";
- he doesn't resent that others have more than he has;
- he is realistic about the outcome of the war;
- he does not see why he should suffer more discomfort than is necessary;
- even on the final morning before the raid, Trotter sings and helps relieve the tension;
- he becomes more thoughtful near the end of the play, feeling honoured by the promotion and helping Stanhope quietly without trying to replace Osborne;
- even Stanhope acknowledges his consistency: "you're always the same";
- he shows some resilience: "Always the same, am I? (He sighs.) Little you know-";
- Sherriff's contrasting of Trotter and Hibbert reflects the former's toughness;
- he has served for a relatively long time in the trenches, recalling the spring of the previous year: "Why a blinkin' may-tree!";
- he represents the ordinary man who has answered his country's call to do his duty: he is conscious of his "dooty". Some candidates may argue that he is good for morale.

However, some candidates may argue:

- Sherriff differentiates between Trotter and Stanhope, having them make their first appearances together and contrasting their physiques – Stanhope is tall and slim; Trotter is clearly not in the best physical shape, short and fat.....middle-aged and homely looking .....his face is red, fat, and round, with a bursting tunic;
- he eats for comfort, in the way that Stanhope drinks;
- his name's association with pigs can be interpreted as an insult;
- he lacks drive and is happy with his lot in life: "empty as I am";
- the others make fun of him.

Some candidates may argue that his status as a "temporary gentleman" will not continue after the war; his awareness of this fact may draw a comment in relation to "someone to admire".

- (b) Look again at the extract from Act 1 beginning towards the middle of page 19 in the Samuel French edition with Trotter's words, "Good. I don't fancy crawling about on my belly..." and ending on page 21 with Stanhope's words: "They're going to take an equal chance – together."

(For those using the Penguin edition, the extract begins on page 28 and ends on page 29.)

With reference to the ways Sherriff presents life in the trenches in the extract and elsewhere in the play, show that there are differing reactions to life in the trenches.

The following textual details may be used as supporting material.

Trench life in the extract:

- the frequent references to food e.g. apricots;
- the throwaway comment: "this 'ere war", is used to make light of the horror;
- the almost farcical apology by Mason about supplying apricots;
- the casual reference to the bed of someone so recently departed: "This was Hardy's bed";
- the insistence on preserving domestic standards: "Must have a little comfort in your old age, Uncle.";
- despite the harsh conditions, SD He takes a whiskey and water;
- Hibbert's dismissive comment about coming under fire: "Bit of sniping somewhere to our left; some rifle grenades coming over just on our right." BUT Hibbert is so terrified he can't eat;
- Stanhope's rapid change of subject: "I see. Mason's got your supper";
- Stanhope's unsympathetic response, "Get tight";
- Stanhope's accusatory: "Another little worm trying to wriggle home";
- Osborne shows concern for others "I wish you'd turn in....".

Sherriff's use of language and dramatic techniques in the extract:

- the soldiers' refusal to be solemn: "this 'ere war" WHY?;
- emphasis on the class structure of the trenches with Mason's subservient appearance to ask about "apricots";
- Stanhope dismisses Mason curtly;
- the routine of drinking: He takes a whiskey and water;
- Hibbert physically seems unwell, a pallid face;
- Hibbert tries to demonstrate that he is unwell, gently rubbing his forehead;
- Hibbert's apologetic attempts to be relieved of duty due to ill health: "beastly neuralgia"; "I'm damn sorry to keep on talking about it";
- judgemental reaction in the stage direction, There is silence following Hibbert's exit;
- Osborne feigns concern whilst filling his pipe;
- Stanhope's cold insults: "Artful little swine!"; "No man of mine's going sick before the attack".

Elsewhere in the play:

- Hardy's joviality because he has had the luck to be relieved just before the fighting begins;
- Stanhope remembers the garden back home; treats the war as if it were a 'Rugger' game, and, finally, just before he meets his own death, immerses himself in the fantasy world of Lewis Carroll – Escapism;
- Stanhope's advice to Raleigh sets the young man on the same path: "You must always think of it like that if you can. Think of it all as – as romantic. It helps";
- faced with the choice of going sick or taking to drink, Stanhope, fully conscious of his actions and their consequences, chooses the latter;
- as Stanhope resolves to die he muses drunkenly, "dreamily, Cross out all he says about me. Then we all go west in the big attack – and she goes on thinking I'm a fine fellow for ever";
- Stanhope is weighed down by his fear of losing his reputation as a hero;
- Trotter seems to simply ignore his fate and faces death with remarkable good humour and toughness;

- Sherriff uses nursery language frequently to help make the war seem bearable: “Minnies – and those horrid little things like pineapples – you know”;
- Sherriff presents a lot of trench talk as counter-intuitive humour: “There’s nothing worse than dirt in your tea.” Nobody makes much of the fact that, apparently, no one died or was seriously injured. Instead, the focus is on the comparatively minor calamity of contaminated tea;
- Sherriff uses absurd and pointless behaviour and chatter as a way of avoiding thinking of the war: “Ever had earwig races?” “dip it in whiskey – makes ‘em go like hell!” is Sherriff’s ironic (and quite possibly unintended) parallel with Stanhope, whose determination and bravery comes out of a bottle;
- Sherriff’s absurd trench humour: “I mean – after all – war’s bad enough with pepper...but war without pepper – it’s – it’s bloody awful!”;
- Sherriff uses the common idiom of the day: “put up a good show”;
- Stanhope’s sarcasm in relation to the staff: “How awfully nice – if the brigadier’s pleased”;
- Stanhope’s denial of reality near the end: “Forget that bloody raid! Think I want to talk about it?” and “We were having a jolly decent evening till you started blabbing about the war”.

6 Stephens: The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time

- (a) With reference to the ways Stephens presents honesty, show how far you agree that Ed and Judy are honest.

The following textual details may be used as supporting material.

Evidence that Ed is honest:

- despite the deception Stephens reveals Ed's awkward attempt to be honest when he tells Christopher his mother has "a problem with her heart";
- Stephens presents Ed's honest opinion of his son to his teacher: "Christopher is getting a crap enough deal already";
- Ed's interaction with Christopher's teacher shows he wants an honest statement as he is not afraid to hear Mrs Gasgoyne's views on his son;
- Ed's honesty is shown in the frank tone he adopts with his son: "Jesus, Christopher, how stupid are you?";
- the use of stage direction illustrates how, despite the stress of the situation, Ed genuinely loves his son as he: holds his right hand up and spreads his fingers in a fan in order to reassure Christopher;
- Ed's love for Christopher is genuine and he is honestly "very proud" of Christopher finishing his A level examination.

Evidence that Judy is honest:

- Judy has not kept her life secret and has written to Christopher regularly;
- the letters are honest and describe her new life: "I've got a new job...as a secretary";
- she understands that Christopher may still be angry but shares her new address in the hope he will write back;
- the tone of her letters is apologetic but forthright as she explains to Christopher why she felt she had to go away;
- Stephens clearly illustrates her honesty in the tone of her regretful admission that she "was not a very good mother";
- she recognises that she was not as patient a parent as his father showing honesty and acknowledging her limitations;
- she is honest about her feelings of frustration after the incident in Bentalls: "that night I just cried and cried...";
- Stephens reveals the frustration she experienced when she shows more honesty when she admits that: "I couldn't take it anymore";
- she is honest about her relationship with Christopher's father and how: "I felt really lonely";
- she reveals how she started an affair with Roger further suggesting Stephens presents her as someone with nothing more to hide.

However, some candidates may argue:

- Ed is dishonest when he tells Christopher that his mother "has had to go into hospital";
- he insists that Christopher does not ask Mrs Shears about her dog in order to prevent him from discovering the truth;
- Ed hides her letters to Christopher;
- Judy deceives Ed by having an affair with Roger;
- Judy abandons Christopher and elopes with Roger to London;
- her deception adds to Christopher's confusion and he cannot understand that his mother lied to him.

- (b) Look again at the extract on page 89 beginning with the words: “Would you like an iced lolly?” and ending on page 91 with the stage direction, Eventually he calms.

With reference to the ways Stephens presents Christopher in the extract and elsewhere in the play, show how far you agree that Christopher struggles with relationships.

The following textual details may be used as supporting material.

Evidence that Christopher struggles with relationships in the extract:

- when Christopher’s mother reveals that she has phoned Mrs Gasgoyne about sitting his Maths A level, the stage directions tell us Christopher: screams. He throws the iced lolly away illustrating the unpredictable nature of living with Christopher;
- Christopher’s mother struggles as she repeats the phrase “Calm down” in an effort to regain control of the situation in the park;
- his behaviour draws attention from strangers as the ‘Woman on Heath’ asks if Christopher is “OK”, further illustrating that Christopher struggles with relationships;
- Christopher’s difficulties in relationships are reflected in his mother’s strained responses: “Well, what does it look like to you?”;
- Christopher refuses Roger’s gifts dismissing them as “for children” making it hard for Roger to establish a relationship with Christopher;
- Christopher eventually calms down only after his mother puts an end to Roger’s aggressive behaviour towards him.

Stephens’ use of language and dramatic techniques in the extract.

- Christopher’s extreme behaviour is difficult to control showing how he struggles with relationships as the stage directions show how he: screams and screams and only stops because his chest hurts;
- his challenging behaviour is seen through the stage directions that describe how: He listens to the white noise. He turns the volume up very high reinforcing the struggle Christopher has with relationships;
- Christopher rolls himself into a ball to hide after Roger grabs him illustrating his difficulties in living with others;
- Christopher struggles to form relationships which has a detrimental effect on Roger and Judy’s relationship leading to moments of tension between them: She grabs Roger and She pulls him away;
- use of Christopher’s positioning reflects the difficulties he has in forming relationships.

Elsewhere in the play:

- Ed’s brief replies to Christopher’s descriptions of the Milky Way show how Christopher does not realise that his interest in the topic is not shared by his father;
- Christopher’s failure to listen to his father leads to physical violence creating further struggles in their relationship;
- at first, Christopher is unable to cope with learning that his mother is alive and has tried to contact him: “He lies still for a while, wrapped in a ball”.

However, some candidates may argue:

- Christopher does not struggle in the relationship with his teacher, Siobhan, often engaging in reasoned interaction;
- he does not struggle in his interactions with Mrs Alexander who is patient with Christopher and reassures him during their conversation: “I apologise. I didn’t mean to suggest that you were lying”;
- other characters fail to show understanding towards Christopher’s condition making it a struggle for Christopher to express himself as heard in Roger’s dismissive tone: “A gold star. Well that’s very original I have to say”.

7 Wilder: Our Town

- (a) With reference to the ways Wilder presents Dr Gibbs, show how far you agree that Dr Gibbs is caring.

The following textual details may be used as supporting material.

Evidence that Dr Gibbs is caring:

- Dr Gibbs is admired by the people of the town: “The new hospital’s named after him”;
- he makes time for the people of the town, asking after Joe and Howie: “How’s your knee, Joe?”
- he talks about his patients with understanding: “Mrs Wentworth’s coming at eleven. Guess I know what it’s about”;
- he supports his wife when she complains about the children and gently explains to George that he should help his mother: “Well, I knew all I had to do was call your attention to it”;
- he understands George wanting to be treated as more of a grown-up and briefly discusses his future with him: “I’ve decided to raise your spending money”;
- he is fair towards the children, giving Rebecca more allowance as well as George: “Probably Rebecca’ll feel she ought to have some more too”;
- he understands Simon Stimson’s problems: “I guess I know more about Simon Stimson’s affairs than anybody in this town” and gently stops Mrs Gibbs’ gossip: “there’s nothing we can do but just leave it alone”;
- he compliments his wife: “I thought you were the prettiest girl I’d ever seen”;
- he is pleasant when commenting on his married life: “you and I been conversing for twenty years now without any noticeable barren spells”;
- he is jovial towards Mrs Gibbs shown in stage directions: Dr Gibbs starts laughing; Both laugh;
- in Act 3 he is seen bringing flowers to his wife’s grave.

However, some candidates may argue:

- his wife complains about him, describing him with negative language: “grouchy”, “unreasonable” and she comments that “I haven’t heard a serious word out of him since I’ve known him”;
- he mocks his wife’s singing voice: “She hasn’t any more voice than an old crow”;
- he objects to his wife being out late: “Traipsin’ around the streets at this hour of the night”;
- he speaks scornfully about Mrs Gibbs’ friends in the choir: “you stopping at the corner to gossip with a lot of hens”;
- he refuses to agree to his wife’s requests to visit Europe, only travelling to places which are of interest to him and dismisses her attempts to discuss it: “there’s no sense in going over that again”;
- he speaks critically of people in the town who lock their doors: “They’re all getting citified... They haven’t got nothing fit to burgle”;
- he speaks dismissively of possible issues in George and Emily’s married life as, “none of our business”;
- he doesn’t comfort Rebecca on the morning of the wedding even though he says: “I got the impression she’s crying” – but he’s the only one to notice;
- he shouts angrily to George on the morning of the wedding: “George, do as your mother tells you!”;
- some candidates may comment that George seeks advice on the morning of the wedding from Mr Webb rather than his own father.

With reference to the ways Wilder presents attitudes to marriage in the extract and elsewhere in the play, show that there are differing attitudes to marriage.

The following textual details may be used as supporting material.

Attitudes to marriage in the extract:

- George is initially reluctant and feels he is being pushed into marriage: “Why’s everybody pushing me so?”;
- Emily wants to stay as she is and is fearful about getting married: “Why can’t I stay for a while just as I am?”;
- Mrs Gibbs is shocked by George’s reluctance and she scolds him: “If anyone should hear you! Now stop”;
- the parents’ almost unfeeling reactions to their children’s nerves show their support for the institution of marriage;
- George and Emily’s attitudes change as they acknowledge their love for one another and we see their happiness at the end of the scene: “I love you Emily”/“All I want is someone to love me”;
- Mrs Soames presents the stereotypical romantic view of marriage: “Oh, I do love a good wedding”;
- the Stage Manager criticises marriage and presents a more cynical view: “Once in a thousand times it’s interesting”.

Wilder’s use of language and dramatic techniques in the extract:

- George and Emily’s attitudes mirror each other at the start of the scene;
- George and Mrs Gibbs’ interrupted dialogue shows George’s reluctance: “listen to me –...for the last time I ask you...”;
- Mrs Gibbs’ shock shown through exclamation: “Why, I’m ashamed of you!”;
- Emily’s exaggerated reaction shows her fear about getting married: “I hate him. I wish I were dead”;
- Emily’s uncertainty is shown through questions: “Why can’t I...Don’t you remember...”
- use of imperatives show Mr Webbs’ insistence that the marriage must go ahead: “stop and think a minute”;
- Mr Webbs’ takes control and brings George and Emily together to ensure the marriage goes ahead, through use of stage directions: He leads her towards George;
- George and Emily’s love is shown through stage directions: They fall into each other’s arms;
- Mrs Soames’ use of clichés shows the traditional romantic view of marriage: “I do love a good wedding...Doesn’t she make a lovely bride?...I always cry”;
- the Stage Manager’s cynical view is superimposed on the tableau of the traditional wedding: stage is suddenly arrested into silent tableau;
- the final action of the scene undermines the Stage Manager’s bitter comments about marriage as the audience is left with the bride and groom looking radiant and Mrs Soames’ positive comments: “The important thing is to be happy”.

Elsewhere in the play:

- Dr and Mrs Gibbs appear to be in a happy marriage, despite being strangers on their wedding day: “There I was in the Congregational Church marryin’ a total stranger”;
- Mrs Gibbs expresses the opinion that marriage is a vital part of life: “people are meant to go through life two by two”;
- Mr Webb reassures George about marriage: “Marriage is a wonderful thing – wonderful thing”;

- Mr and Mrs Webb’s marriage is presented as dull, with little time for one another, often speaking sharply to one another: “bitingly Well, Myrtle, if you want to give the boy some good advice, I’ll go upstairs and leave you alone with him”;
- the Stage Manager’s monologue describes marriage as a long-standing institution: “some churches say that marriage is a sacrament...there’s a lot of confusion way down deep ...don’t forget all the other witnesses at this wedding – the ancestors”;
- Emily describes her happy marriage with George in Act Three: “George and I have made that farm into just the best place you ever saw...I loved him so”.

Section B – Poetry

Guidelines to Assessing AO2 in Candidates' Response to Unit 2: Section B

Assessment Objective 2 requires candidates to “explain how language, structure and form contribute to writers’ presentation of ideas, characters, themes and settings.”

Use of Language and Stylistic Devices/Poetic Techniques

When assessing candidates’ responses to poetry, some of the following uses of language and stylistic devices may be noted. (This list is neither prescriptive nor exhaustive, but is intended as a helpful guide):

- versification and structure (use of some terms e.g. quatrain, couplet, octave, metre, iambic rhythm)
- specific forms, e.g. ode, sonnet, monologue, lyric
- similes and metaphors
- imagery and use of the senses (especially visual imagery and auditory imagery)
- alliteration and other “sound” features e.g. assonance, consonance, repetition, rhyme and rhythm
- vocabulary choices
- repetition of words or ideas
- use of punctuation
- visual impact the poem may have on the page

8 Anthology One: IDENTITY

- (a) Look again at Kid by Simon Armitage which deals with the theme of growing up, and at one other poem from the IDENTITY anthology which also deals with the theme of growing up.

With close reference to the ways each poet uses language, compare and contrast what the speakers in the poems say about growing up. You should include relevant contextual material.

Possible comparisons: Piano; I Remember, I Remember; Catrin; In Mrs Tilscher's class.

The following textual details may be used as supporting material.

What the named poem is about:

- it is a dramatic monologue in the voice of Robin, Batman's side-kick;
- Robin describes how he has split from Batman and come out from under his shadow, becoming stronger as he grows up;
- it presents a difficult relationship between the speaker and Batman, as Robin reveals some of Batman's secrets which show him in a less heroic light.

Candidates' response to use of language:

- alliteration in the first line to set a mocking tone: "Batman, big shot";
- repeated use of –er sound at the end of every line and also internally to increase the pace of the poem;
- the unrelenting rhyme is suggestive of the theme tune;
- use of slang to show the poor relationship between the speaker and Batman: "or ditched me, rather";
- use of slang and clichés as the speaker reveals details about Batman, showing the poor relationship between them: "scotched that 'he was like a father/ to me' rumour";
- metaphor to show the speaker's scornful feelings as he grows up: "I'm not playing ball boy any longer";
- play on words, using the traditional Robin catchphrases from the original comics as the speaker hints at Batman's infidelity: "Holy roll-me-over-in-the-clover";
- contrast between Robin's uniform and what he now chooses to wear as he matures: "I've doffed that...jeans and crew-neck jumper";
- enjambment used as the lines lengthen to show the speaker's strength of feeling, creating a sense of a breathless rant at Batman;
- the tone varies between bitter and triumphant as the speaker reflects on the poor relationship and celebrates finally gaining his independence: "ditched me ...in the gutter", "now I'm the real boy wonder";
- use of comparatives to show Robin's coming-of-age and the tough lessons he had to learn: "taller, harder, stronger, older";
- the poem is darkly humorous, mocking the stereotypical hero/side-kick relationship;
- title 'Kid' lifts it beyond Robin to common experience of teenager.

Similarities and differences in the poets' attitudes:

Reward clear connections made between the theme of growing up in the Armitage poem and growing up described in the self-chosen poem. Reward also comparisons and contrasts made between the poems as regards poetic technique and relevant contextual material.

Candidates' awareness of contexts:

- (b) Look again at Prayer Before Birth by Louis MacNeice which deals with the theme of facing danger, and at one other poem from the IDENTITY anthology which also deals with the theme of facing danger.

With close reference to the ways each poet uses language, compare and contrast what the speakers in the poems say about facing danger. You should include relevant contextual material.

Possible comparisons: Belfast Confetti; Invictus.

The following textual details may be used as supporting material.

What the named poem is about:

- the poem is a monologue by an unborn child which considers the dangers of the world he or she will be born into.

Candidates' response to the use of language:

- the title gives the impression of a mother's prayer for her child but the opening line makes it clear the speaker is the unborn child: "I am not yet born";
- the indentation of the lines may draw comment to reflect the contractions of a mother;
- the juxtaposition of the innocence of the unborn baby and the evils of the world underlines the dangers the baby faces;
- anaphora of "I am not yet born" to remind the reader that the speaker is an innocent unborn child, emphasising the dangers which are described;
- several lines end with "me" or "my" showing the speaker's fear for him or herself;
- the first stanza immediately sets a scene of danger and fear of evil beings: "Let not the... club-footed ghouls come near me";
- the speaker develops the call for protection against the dangers of the human world in subsequent stanzas: "I fear that the human race may...";
- use of imperatives as the child demands protection: "console me...provide me...forgive me...rehearse me...hear me";
- regular use of assonance emphasising the dangers the child will face: "bat...rat", "wise lies";

- the pessimistic view of the world is shown in the fourth stanza where the speaker asks for forgiveness for sins he or she may commit: "forgive me/For the sins that in me the world shall commit";
- enjambment used as the speaker's thoughts of the dangers of the world develop: "mountains/frown at me...my children curse me";

- use of metaphor to show the dangers of war: "a lethal automaton...a cog in a machine";
- use of simile to show how frail the speaker is in face of the dangers of the world: "blow me like thistle-down", "like water held in the/hands";
- the final short shocking line shows the nihilistic view of a dangerous world: "Otherwise kill me".

Similarities and differences in the poets' attitudes:

Reward clear connections made between the description of danger in the MacNeice poem and the description of danger shown in the self-chosen poem. Reward also comparisons and contrasts made between the poems as regards poetic technique and relevant contextual material.

9 Anthology Two: RELATIONSHIPS

- (a) Look again at To His Coy Mistress by Andrew Marvell which deals with the theme of desire and at one other poem from the RELATIONSHIPS anthology which also deals with the theme of desire.

With close reference to the ways each poet uses language, compare and contrast what the speakers in the poems say about desire. You should also include relevant contextual material.

Possible comparisons: Sonnet 130; Wild Oats.

The following textual detail may be used as supporting material.

What the named poem is about:

The speaker in this dramatic monologue argues that if he and his beloved had time, he would bestow lavish affection upon her. However, as time cannot be stopped, the speaker argues that the object of his affection should not resist and they should express their desire for one another without delay.

Candidates' response to the use of language:

- the poem has three verse paragraphs, each marking a stage in the speaker's argument: the opening paragraph employs a conceit to present the way the speaker would show his affection for the object of his desire, suggesting how he would: "Love you ten years before the flood";
- the speaker's tone appeals to reason as he reassures his mistress that "Had we but world enough, and time" her "coyness...were no crime", suggesting desire;
- familiar romantic ideas are humorously exaggerated as he reveals his impatience at the distances separating the would-be lovers: "Thou by the Indian Ganges' side" while he "by the tide/ of Humber would complain";
- biblical imagery is used to heighten the intensity of his desire: "I would/Love you ten years before the flood";
- the speaker reasons speciously and flattery as he permits his mistress to, "refuse/ Till the conversion of the Jews";
- the speaker refers to natural love and its organic growth in the "vegetable love" and employs grandiose language to describe it as "Vaster than empires";
- further exaggeration of traditional romantic imagery follows as he describes how hundreds of years would be spent on praising her eyes and "Two hundred to adore each breast" further reinforcing the sense of desire felt by the speaker;
- a tone of caution is introduced through the word "but" and the reference to time's "wingèd chariot" implies a sense of urgency on the part of the speaker;
- desolate imagery typifies the second section as the speaker presents the idea that beauty, like their opportunity to submit to their desires, is bound by the passing of time: "before us lie/ Deserts of vast eternity";
- imagery of death is used to remind the object of his desire that death is inevitable: "thy marble vault";
- the speaker's argument is reinforced through unpleasant imagery in the reference to "worms";
- the use of the rhyming couplet captures the choice his mistress must face as the speaker juxtaposes "dust" and "lust" bringing together ideas of desire with ideas of death;
- parenthetical commas are used to conclude the second section and present the conclusion of the lover's argument to his mistress: "The grave's a fine and private place,/ But none, I think, do there embrace";
- a tone of urgency is supported through imagery that captures the speaker's impatience: "the youthful glue/Sits on thy skin";
- the speaker's almost animalistic passion is characterised by the simile comparing the lovers to "amorous birds of prey";

- use of erotic language: ‘now let us sport’, ‘instant fires’, ‘amorous’;
- the speaker concludes his argument in a more pleasant-sounding series of sibilant phrases that reinforce his assertion that the experience will be a pleasurable one: “sun/ Stand still.”

Similarities and differences in the poets’ attitudes:

Reward clear connections made between what the speaker says about desire in the Marvell poem and how desire is presented in the self-chosen poem. Reward also comparisons and contrasts made between the poems as regards poetic technique and relevant contextual material.

Candidate’s awareness of contexts:

- the poem can be read as an example of Carpe Diem poetry – a classical form seen in the Roman poet Horace;
- the dominant religion in the 17th century was Puritanism which encouraged restraint and avoidance of sinful behaviour;
- Marvell worked as tutor to the daughter and ward of the Puritan leader Oliver Cromwell possibly during the time the poem was first written;
- Marvell served under Charles II as MP for Hull; a location referenced in the poem;
- Marvell is closely associated with the Metaphysical poets of the seventeenth century who used elaborate metaphors called conceits to discuss themes of love among other themes in an often startling and novel way.

- (b) Look again at When You Are Old by W B Yeats which deals with the theme of regret, and at one other poem from the RELATIONSHIPS anthology which also deals with the theme of regret.

With close reference to the ways each poet uses language, compare and contrast what the speakers in the poems say about regret. You should include relevant contextual material.

Possible comparisons: Wild Oats; I am very bothered.

The following textual detail may be used as supporting material.

What the named poem is about:

The speaker expresses his regret that his love for the subject of the poem is unrequited. The speaker imagines how her beauty may fade with age and how, on reading a book of his poetry, she will be transported back to her youth when she was the object of much attention. The speaker concludes by regretfully observing that he loves not only her physical beauty but her spirit and that both are beyond his reach and she will 'murmur, a little sadly' too.

Candidates' response to the use of language:

- the poem consists of three quatrains with a regular ABBA rhyme suggesting a regretful, almost dreamlike quality to the speaker's words;
- the speaker uses direct address towards the subject of the poem whom he imagines as having become an old woman;
- the title is repeated in the first line drawing attention to the passage of time and establishing the situation;
- a series of clauses connected by the repeated word "and" point to a future in which the subject of the poem has aged: "old and grey and full of sleep";
- the speaker's description of old age is gentle in tone and he is careful not to seem offensive despite his own regrets;
- the speaker's instruction is a gentle imperative to "take down" and "slowly read";
- there is a wistful and regretful tone to the memory of the subject's former beauty: "the soft look/Your eyes had once";
- the shift of focus to the exceptionality of the woman is signalled by the word "But";
- the contrast in attitude towards the woman: "loved your beauty.../But one man loved the pilgrim soul in you";
- the speaker questions if the love of those who adored her was "false or true";
- the tone of regret and sadness intensifies as the speaker focuses on the quality of his own love, "pilgrim soul" and the "sorrows of your changing face";
- the gentle verb "bending" reminds the listener of the subject's age and imagines her own regrets of "how Love fled";
- the imagery of the final lines completes the sense of regret that sincere love is beyond her reach as the speaker describes how he anxiously "paced" upon the mountains and how he "hid his face amid a crowd of stars".

Similarities and differences in the poets' attitudes:

Reward clear connections made between what the speaker says about regret in the Yeats poem and how regret is presented in the self-chosen poem. Reward also comparisons and contrasts made between the poems as regards poetic technique and relevant contextual material.

Candidate's awareness of contexts:

- WB Yeats became interested in Irish Nationalism and became besotted with a leading figure in the movement, Maud Gonne;
- his marriage proposals to Maud Gonne were rejected several times leaving the poet to reflect on his unrequited love for her in verse;
- the poem is taken from a collection of poems presented to Maud Gonne.

10 Anthology Three CONFLICT

- (a) Look again at The Man He Killed by Thomas Hardy which deals with the realities of conflict, and at one other poem from the CONFLICT anthology which also deals with the realities of conflict.

With close reference to the ways each poet uses language, compare and contrast what the speakers in the poems say about the realities of conflict. You should include relevant contextual material.

Possible comparison: Anthem for Doomed Youth; Bayonet Charge, Vergissmeinnicht.

The following textual details may be used as supporting material.

What the named poem is about:

- the speaker recalls a time when he shot a man in war, and realises that if they had met at a bar instead of on the battlefield, they could have shared a drink;
- the speaker then goes on to describe the reality of how he killed the man and tries to explain why;
- in the end, the speaker doesn't have a good reason for killing the man;
- the speaker makes war personal but by highlighting that depersonalisation is a reality of conflict;
- designed to make reader think about common humanity and the futility of war.

Candidates' response to the use of language:

- from the title the reader knows what has happened;
- the poem is written in the form of a dramatic monologue characterising a speaker who has experienced the realities of conflict;
- the poem is written in the first person and yet the title generalizes the experience;
- the poem begins with a hypothetical to help the reader understand the humanity of each man;
- the poem follows a simple alternating ABAB rhyme scheme which contrasts with the serious subject matter of conflict in war;
- the word "but" jolts the reader into reality, the speaker having a near-death experience;
- the breavity and starkness of lines 7–8 emphasise the fleeting nature of the encounter;
- emotionless tone emphasises reality;
- the repetition of "because" shows the speaker searching for a reason for killing;
- parenthesis is used to increase uncertainty and confusion; "Was out of work – had sold his traps –";
- the enjambment between the 3rd and 4th stanzas leads the reader on to understand the similarity of the two men;
- the understated use of "quaint" and "curious" conveys the speaker's inability to give an adequate response to the realities of war;
- the exclamation in the final stanza brings focus to the speaker's thoughts – this could have been a man he would have shared a drink within other circumstances;
- the overall style is simple (in rhyme and rhythm and language) to increase poignancy.

Similarities and differences in the poets' attitudes:

Reward clear connections made between the realities of the conflict situation described by the Hardy poem and the realities of the conflict situation shown in the self-chosen poem. Reward also comparisons and contrasts made between the poems as regards poetic technique and relevant contextual material.

Candidates' awareness of contexts:

- Hardy had a keen interest in history, and studied many of the wars that had happened much before his time;
- this knowledge of the effects of war, brought Hardy to write poems which expressed a desire for peace;

- the experiences that Hardy had throughout his life did not give him a very optimistic view of mankind;
- Hardy wrote this poem to express his feelings about the Boer War.

- (b) Look again at What lips my lips have kissed, and where, and why (Sonnet XLIII) by Edna St Vincent Millay which deals with the theme of remembering the past, and at one other poem from the CONFLICT anthology which also deals with the theme of remembering the past.

With close reference to the ways each poet uses language, compare and contrast what the speakers in the poems say about remembering the past. You should include relevant contextual material.

Possible comparison: Last Post; Easter Monday (In Memoriam E.T.) (1917).

The following textual details may be used as supporting material.

What the named poem is about:

- this Petrarchan sonnet is told from the perspective of a speaker who cannot remember the lovers of her past, only the happy state she must once have inhabited;
- the speaker describes what parts of her memory have been lost, “what” her lips have kissed, “why” they kissed, and “where” they kissed;
- now all she feels – “a quiet pain” for the “unremembered lads”;
- the rain of the present day is bringing out ghosts of memories.

Candidates’ response to the use of language:

- the first line of the poem also serves as the title;
- the octave is focused on simply remembering the events of the speaker’s past;
- the sestet takes the tone from one of simple remembrance to something closer to mourning as the speaker considers the present situation;
- the sestet is an extended comparison of herself to a tree;
- the speaker moves from the past to the present; the past is mostly positive whereas the present is mostly isolation; the seasons in the poem can be seen as symbols of time passing in her life;
- personification of the winter tree indicates the speaker’s inability to remember and to emphasise her loneliness;
- the “birds” are a symbol of her lost lovers;
- the joyous metaphor of “summer sang in me is undermined by the use of the past tense”;
- the last lines are deeply sad as the speaker remembers the past and seems devoid of hope for the present.

Similarities and differences in what the poets say about remembering the past:

Reward clear connections made between the theme of remembering the past in the Millay poem and as described in the self-chosen poem. Reward also comparisons and contrast made between the poems as regards poetic technique and relevant contextual material.

Candidates awareness of contexts:

- Edna St Vincent Millay was born in America in 1892;
- in 1923, Millay married Eugen Boissevain who gave up his own career to manage Millay’s literary one;
- she would become one of the most respected poets in the United States and would win the Pulitzer Prize in 1923 for her collection of poems, “The Ballad of the Harp-Weaver”;
- her popularity stemmed from both her remarkably crafted sonnets and her bohemian lifestyle, including her political stances, and open relationships.
